This declaration was made here today by Reschid Pasha, one of the Turkish envoys to the peace conference here between representatives of the Balkan states and Turkey to the United Press correspondent.

"So far as I am concerned," said Reschid Pasha, "the whole matter rests with the powers. I am not peace conference without direct instructions from Constantinople.

"We have conceded everything possible while the allies have conceded nothing. We have surrendered over 200,000 kilometers of Turkish territory. The Balkan envoys entered the conference with an unconciliatory spirit and that has been their attitude throughout the conferences.

LONDON, Jan. 9.-The dispute over Aridanople seemed today the only serious obstacle remaining as a bar to the settlement of the Turko-Balkan war. The Turkish envoys here received fresh instructions from Constantinople during the night, which, it is reported, ordered them to refuse to compromise until the European powers actually intervene. Turkey could then abandon Arianople and save her dignity.

The ambassadorial "conversations" are still in progress, and a definite program of intervention is expected to be agreed upon this afternoon.

Premier Venizelos, chief of the Greek plenipotentiaries here, said today that the Greek delegates were authorized to insist upon ession by Turkey to Greece of the Islands in the Aegan sea.

"Our failure to get these Islands" said Venizelos, "would precipitate a revolution at home that would overthrow the government."

The powers, it is understood, have not yet reached a decision regarding the disposition of the Aegean islands, but are unamiously in favor of the allies getting Adrianople.
